Before We Cross the Jordan

For a while on Sunday evenings, we have devoted our lessons to the Pentateuch, the first five books of the Bible, or the books of Moses. This last Sunday was the final in that study, and I hope you've grown an appreciation for those books as well as the Old Testament in general. I wanted to make sure we studied them as an overview, not verse-by-verse.

As Moses and Israel stood in the land of Moab, they could see across the Jordan, in the distance, the city of Jericho. The moment they crossed the Jordan would be akin to Caesar crossing the Rubicon with his legions—there's no turning back. Before they went, however, Moses instructed a new generation of Israelites of the covenant that their fathers had entered with God.

Moses set the stage in Deuteronomy 1–11 with a speech reminding them of their recent past and who God was. Then, in chapters 12–26, he gave a collection of laws pertinent for Israel to keep as a part of God's covenant. Finally, in the final chapters (27–34), Moses gives his last speech and warns Israel of the consequences of disobedience. He also told them the blessings God will give if they are faithful. Then, as a conclusion, he implores Israel to choose life by keeping the covenant.

Expulsion from the Garden of Eden was humanity's punishment for sin. Centuries later, Israel's expulsion from the Promised Land is depicted as a death in Ezekiel 37. Israel's life would return once they returned to the Promised Land from exile (Ezekiel 37:14). This central theme is observable throughout Scripture—dwelling with God in Eden and Israel is life. Dwelling with God in heaven is life, and exile is death. Exile from God in heaven is the second death.

To ensure we live and do not die, we must choose life too. We must choose covenant faithfulness. By doing so, we are loving our God and our neighbor. All the laws Moses gave were to reflect these two great commands. The same still stands for us today—love God and our neighbor. We can never go wrong by doing these two commands. If faithful, we'll one day cross the Jordan to be with the Lord.

Hymns of Thanksgiving # 4

Fred Pratt Green (1903-2000) was one of the most prolific British hymn writers of the 20th century and his Thanksgiving hymn, For The Fruit of All Creation, written in 1970, quickly made its way into the Thanksgiving repertoire. It is usually sung to the Welsh hymn AR HYDY Y NOS which we recognize as ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT. Although not in our hymnal, Derek has led this one at Glendale on a few occasions.

Another 20th century Thanksgiving hymn which has become widely popular is Katherine Davis' Let All Things Now Living – A Song of Thanksgiving. Written in 1939, it is universally sung to the Welsh hymn tune, ASH GROVE. Again, it is not in our hymnal but well worth learning.

Davis (1892-1980) also wrote The Little Drummer Boy but maybe she can be forgiven for that!!!

YOUTH Jacob Vaughan

The young men will be leading the worship service this Sunday night. I encourage all of you to attend to see the amount of love and devotion that these young men have for God and one another as they direct us through worship.

The youth Christmas party will be coming up next month. Please be looking out for more details in the future. There will be games, food, and fun to be had for all those in attendance. May be a few competitions as well.

CYC signups have been posted on the bulletin board. We will leave on February 24th and return home on the 27th. It is held in Pigeon Forge, Tennessee. The cost to attend is $150 which will include all meals and entertainment that the group attends. The only reason to bring money will be for any souvenirs or snacks while at the conference itself.

Breakfast with Santa will be on December 4th from 9:00 – 11:00. Masks will be required while talking to Santa, so we don't spread germs or viruses to children around the world since Santa is in his traveling season.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT SERVICE

We will be singing in the auditorium this Wednesday night from 7-8. No Classes will meet.
